All staff, permanent and visiting, have visiting hours when they will be available to see students. Students should arrange to see staff at those times or by special appointment. Visiting hours will be posted on staff doors and on the Departmental notice-board.

Aims of the MA Programme

The taught MA programme may be followed on an intensive basis over 12 months or (particularly for those in full employment) as a programme in which courses are followed over two consecutive academic years.

The programme aims to provide a basic foundation in social theories and in research methodologies, with a particular focus on Eastern and Central Europe. Students may choose one of three 'tracks' focusing on the political, economic or cultural aspects of social life. Within each 'track' students are encouraged to develop their own ideas using the theoretical and methodological tools to which they will be introduced. The most important part of the programme is the research project which students undertake throughout their time at the Centre and which must be presented in a dissertation at the end of the programme [October 9th 2019]. Students can themselves choose the subject of their project, but are encouraged to explore some aspect of their own society or environment, preferably in comparative perspective. By providing a variety of optional elements, the course aims to encourage students to develop their own interests and skills in the way most appropriate for them.

The programme is supplemented by a series of guest lectures by distinguished visitors and experts throughout the year. An opportunity is also provided for students to meet guest lecturers on a less formal basis.

Links with other institutions

The MA degree is validated by Lancaster University, UK. Lancaster is among the top rated research universities in Britain and has one of the leading social science faculties in Britain, with a large postgraduate community and active research culture. The GSSR, the Institute of Philosophy and Sociology and Lancaster University are committed to developing and extending research and teaching links.

Students should note that degrees with similar titles but awarded in different countries cannot be automatically treated as direct equivalents. For example a British MA is different from a Polish “magisterium” (please see the web site www.gssr.edu.pl MA programmes “why a British MA” for more information).

The Graduate School for Social Research also organizes doctoral studies. This is just one element in a local academic environment comprising the Polish Academy of Sciences, the University of Warsaw and others. The GSSR, for example, developing links with University College London (UCL) and Ohio State University.

Course Structure

The 2018- 2019 MA teaching Programme has several components

- The induction period
- Courses: lectures, tutorials/additional contact hours
- MA Seminars

In addition to attending taught courses, tutorials and seminars, students also carry out their own research for an MA dissertation.

The Induction Period (October 15th -27th 2018)

In the induction period assessment will be carried out to identify students who lack sufficient formal training in essential language skills. They will then have an opportunity in individual meetings to bring their skills and knowledge to the required levels. In particular students will be assisted in their efforts to gain an appropriate level of competence in English and to gain requisite study skills.

In subsequent academic writing classes, students learn about writing essays, formalities of referencing and avoiding plagiarism, and achieving good tone. A few lessons also focus on preparing students for the TOEFL/IELTS for those unable to take the test before arrival (see English language programme below).

Courses

Formal teaching is divided into three teaching periods with shorter more intensive, courses held predominantly in teaching period 3.

English language programme

As part of their academic course of study, students are required to achieve a level of English-language proficiency as defined by the Language Teaching Centre in consultation with faculty. To this end, all non-native English speaking students must attend courses designed to introduce them to western-style academic writing and strengthen general English language skills for use in the Master's programme and beyond.

Lectures

The large number of optional courses is intended to allow students, with the assistance of their tutors, to construct programmes to suit their individual interests within the overall theme of the MA Degree. Each course comprises at least 20 hours of formal teaching whether delivered as two weekly 50 minute classes over the 12 weeks of a whole semester or, for example, over one or two weeks in teaching period 3.

Normally a minimum attendance of ten students (including "Audit" students see p 6) will be required for any optional course to take place. Under-subscribed courses (i.e. those in which less than 5 students have registered to take the course for credit) are liable to cancellation before commencement. In the event of such cancellation students will be advised which alternative course most nearly suits their interests.

Students are required to complete registration for courses before the beginning of each respective teaching period. Courses are to be chosen according to the instructions given on page 9-10. Students may attend additional courses which will NOT count towards the final degree mark, but a record will be made in the student's transcript that the student attended the course for 'audit' (see below p 6).

If you register for a course and then do not attend, or do not hand in an essay for the course, you will automatically receive the mark "Fail".

Attendance of classes for chosen courses is mandatory. Up to 10% of the overall mark for any course may be awarded as recognition of students' active participation in the course.

Students who fail to register for courses by the published deadlines will be assumed to have withdrawn from the programme. To register for courses students use the school database <https://db.css.edu.pl>

Tutorials/additional contact hours

In addition to formal teaching hours, teaching staff will meet with students during individual tutorials.

Course credit

Marks for coursework will be weighted as follows:
Dissertation	40% of the overall mark
Each of 3 courses in period 1	6% of the overall mark
Each of 3 courses in period II	7% of the overall mark
Each of 3 intensive courses in period III	7% of the overall mark

Audit

Students wishing to ‘broaden their horizons’ are normally welcome to attend courses in addition to those for which they have registered ‘for credit’ (the courses chosen according to the instructions on page 8/9). Students should ask the teacher of the course at the beginning of the course for permission to attend for audit, and whenever possible signal their intention at registration. Students attending a course for audit are expected to participate as for any other class, but need not write the final assessed essay.

MA Seminars

Students will attend an MA seminar at least once a week, starting at the beginning of the second semester and continuing through the summer, meeting in very small groups (or individually) for regular 2-hour intensive discussion of dissertation work. Seminar convenors include:
H Banaszak, S Kapralski, A Rychard.

MA Programme Structure

The Centre offers its post-graduate MA programme in three tracks: MA in Society and Politics; MA in Economy and Society; MA in Culture, Media and Society. The programme is followed on an intensive basis over 12 months, or as a 2 year “regular” programme for certain students (particularly for those in full time employment).

Each academic year divided into a pre-sessional period, three teaching periods and a research period. While each part is self-contained, together they form the basis of a study programme that begins with an in part compulsory course load (teaching period 1), moves into more advanced option tracks while gradually introducing students to independent research (teaching period 2) and finally concentrates on completion of the Master’s dissertation (teaching period 3 and research period). Intensive tutorial contact throughout the year is an important part of the programme in all four tracks.

Each MA Programme comprises 9 twenty hour courses, of which two are compulsory and 7 are chosen from among a list of options. Each course is assessed on the basis of one 3000 word essay. The MA programmes are completed by presentation of a 15000 word dissertation.

When choosing their 7 optional courses to complete the MA programme, students will:

EITHER choose at least one track-specific course (in bold) per teaching period from track 1 and during the entire year a total of not more than one track-specific course from track 2 or 3* to be awarded an MA in Society and Politics on successful completion of the programme.

OR choose at least one track-specific course (in bold) per teaching period from track 2, and during the entire year a total of not more than one track-specific course from track 1 or 3* to be awarded an MA in Economy and Society on successful completion of the programme.

OR choose at least one track-specific course (in bold) per teaching period from track 3, and during the entire year a total of not more than one track-specific course from track 1 or 2* to be awarded an MA in Culture, Media and Society on successful completion of the programme.

NB: During the second teaching period one of the 3 courses you choose must be a methods course (see table on next page).

In TOTAL students may not choose more than one course from outside their chosen degree track

It is expected that MA dissertations will address subjects within the area of the chosen MA track

* These are given in bold in the table on the next page

Essays and Assessment

During each teaching period students are required to submit for each course one essay of about 3,000 words. These will count towards the final mark in the way shown in the table given on page 7. The overall mark for any course may be modified by + or - in recognition of students' active participation in the course. Such recognition is based upon the quality of presentations and reaction papers given by students during the course¹.

Essay titles are normally chosen from a selection provided by the course lecturer. Only in exceptional cases may a student with the agreement of the course lecturer write on a topic other than one proposed by the lecturer. Before you hand in your essay you should also check it using turnitin (<http://www.turnitin.com>). If you have forgotten how to do this see the instructions in the section on dissertations below.

Deadline for essays for courses in:

Teaching period 1	-13:00 on Tuesday February 5th, 2019
Teaching period 2	-13:00 on Tuesday May 14 th , 2019
Teaching period 3	-13:00 on Wednesday October 9 th , 2019

- a) You should hand in TWO copies of each essay at the office (room 258) before the deadline. Only essays brought to the office before the deadline (ie not those given to anyone else in the Department and not those brought to the office later) count as handed in on time.
- b) All essays should be handed in with a half-page abstract preceding the main text of the essay
- c) Print a word count (essay text without bibliography) at the top of the abstract .

If a student is unable to hand in a piece of work on time or will miss an examination, then s/he should supply good reasons in advance to the Director of the School to obtain permission. In the case of absence or delay due to sickness, medical certificates should be provided (see also code of practice §5, p26).

Essays submitted after the deadline will be penalised at a rate of one grade per day (ie A becomes A-). Essays submitted two weeks or more after the deadline will receive a mark of "Fail", "D-" or "D".

¹ All students are expected to give presentations. Having given a presentation is therefore not in itself sufficient grounds for award of an additional '+' for active participation (ie B going to B+), although failure to give a presentation would constitute grounds for a reduction in the course mark by the same amount (ie B goes to B-). Poor attendance (but not sufficiently poor to warrant a failing mark) may also be penalized by a reduction in the final course mark by the same amount.

Non-submission will not normally be condoned by the Examination Board ie if you do not submit the required coursework for every course you will fail the programme.

Dissertations

The dissertation will be on a topic chosen by the individual student. Each dissertation must be typed. It should be submitted in two copies, only one of which should bear the student's name on the first page along with the title of the dissertation, and the other the title only (see also code of practice). Each student will be assigned a supervisor for their dissertation, whom they should consult regularly. The dissertation will count for 40% of the final degree mark and should be submitted by October 9th 2019 (for students following the 12 month programme; October 2019 for the two year programme) ie the two paper copies should have been delivered to room 258 by the published deadline.

Dissertations should be up to 15,000 words long, the final part of any much longer work (20,000 words should be regarded as an absolute maximum) will not be read by the examiners. The author could simply be asked to submit a shorter version next year. Students are strongly encouraged to suggest a topic as soon as possible to the Faculty committee so that supervision can be arranged and work begin without delay. It is expected that MA dissertations will address subjects within the area of the chosen MA track (see pp 8/9).

Students frequently ask whether all or part of an essay may be included in a dissertation. The policy of the Centre is as follows:

Material from course work may not be repeated in the dissertation, since credit has already been given for this material (when the course work was marked). To do so is to be guilty of self-plagiarism.

Dissertation deadline: October 9th, 2019

In order to meet the above deadline students should work to the following timetable:

A draft dissertation plan (probably five or so typed pages) should be submitted to tutors by the end of the first teaching period. Please submit a second copy to the main office (room 258). Students should aim to agree with their tutors the main topic of research, the main issues to be discussed and/or theoretical approach to be adopted, and key items of the literature to be consulted. The final theme of the dissertation should be decided by the end of teaching period 2 (12-month AND 2 year programme). Normally students will not change the agreed theme of their dissertation to any significant extent after this date.

In co-operation with their tutors students should produce a rough working plan agreeing key deadlines such as those for:

- Production of a first draft of the introduction with an outline of the project and the student's own dissertation enabling
 - a) presentation of a more complete table of contents
 - b) a more comprehensive bibliography
- Presentation of outlines of the main chapters in 1a)
- Completion of the main chapters, first draft of conclusion
- Production of a first draft for comment.

NB By the end of teaching period 3 intensive study students should have made significant progress in the writing of their dissertations if they are to be completed and handed in by the deadline of 13:00 on October 9th 2019.

PLEASE NOTE THE OCTOBER DEADLINE
CANNOT BE CHANGED. YOU SHOULD NOT EXPECT TO RECEIVE YOUR DEGREE
ALONGSIDE YOUR COLLEAGUES IF YOU
MISS THE DEADLINE

In order to ensure that sufficient progress has been made, students should submit a partial draft (usually about 2/3 of the planned final version) of their dissertation to supervisors during the Research period, usually by the beginning of August in the year in which they expect to submit the dissertation. Supervisors are asked to give their comments on the work within two weeks..

Your "own" supervisor who has helped you previously may not always be available during the summer months. During the summer therefore "duty supervisors" will be available to assist students at times to be shown on the main notice-board.

To avoid misunderstandings about the originality of your work when dissertations are marked, all students submitting their final dissertation this year should do so to the turnitin website (<http://www.turnitin.com>) by 13.00 on Wednesday, 2nd October 2019 . These submissions and the reports generated by turnitin will be checked by Dr Chambers to ensure that all dissertations meet our high standards for intellectual honesty and integrity, as specified by the handbook. All students are encouraged to familiarize themselves with the turnitin website as soon as possible, using either the student tutorial videos and instructions (http://www.turnitin.com/en_us/training/student-training) or by meeting with Dr Chambers in person. When signing up to join the turnitin site, you will be asked to provide both a course id and password. This information should not be shared with anyone outside of the CSS.

When submitting your dissertation to turnitin, you will be asked to provide a name for yourself and a title for your work. This information must match the name and title on the first page of your thesis. Please note, you may submit and resubmit your paper in a revised version to turnitin as many times as you like, prior to the aforementioned deadline. And remember, you will not be penalized for any poor turnitin results (high (=bad) scores on the “originality reports”) prior to the deadline. Generally speaking, turnitin requires up to 24 hours to generate a complete “originality report.” It is in your interest to submit your work earlier and check if your work is in compliance with our standards. DO NOT WAIT UNTIL THE LAST MINUTE.

Students will need to submit a document, signed by Dr Chambers, with their dissertation. This document requires the unique paper id number which is generated by any successful submission to turnitin (this number is provided on screen when you submit a paper, and then sent to you by email). Again, if you have any questions, please contact Dr Chambers.

Before you hand in the paper copies (one with your name on, the other without it) of your completed dissertation you should collect a completion form and make sure that the relevant signatures have been collected (see also Code of Practice §6).

WITHOUT THE COMPLETION FORM YOUR DISSERTATION WILL NOT BE ACCEPTED

Please note too that once you have handed in your dissertation, you have completed the Programme. One consequence of this is that students receiving a stipend cease to be eligible for further payments- stipends are of course only payable to people participating in one of the Centre’s programmes.

All students receiving financial aid in any form (eg partial fee waiver) who plan to be away from Warsaw during teaching period 1, 2 or 3 or at any time during the Research period before their dissertation is handed in should first seek in writing the permission of the Centre's Director.

Examining

The examination procedures and marks will be scrutinised by an external examiner from a second university, who is not otherwise connected with Lancaster University, or with the Centre.

Each dissertation will first be independently marked by two faculty members. To ensure fairness, each piece of work will be identified by a number so that the markers, who will not confer with each other until after marking has finished, will not know the authors' names. In the event of a disagreement, the work will be passed to a third marker for adjudication. Final marks will be decided at an Examination Board after the Programme has ended. Coursework (essay) marks will also be taken into consideration at this meeting.

NB All aspects of the course are monitored by a committee from the University of Lancaster, which validates the MA programme.

Marking Scheme

The marking scheme is as follows:

Grade level	Grade points
A+	5.00
A	4.33
A-	3.67
B+	3.33
B	3.00
B-	2.67
C+	2.33
C	2.00
C-	1.67
D+	1.33
D	1.0
D-	0.67
F	0.00

Criteria for Assessment of Essays and Dissertations

In order to ensure consistency of marking between courses, faculty are asked to observe the following guidelines.

All essays, dissertations and project reports in order to be awarded a grade, must present material clearly with the minimum of grammatical, spelling or typographical errors and provide notes and a bibliography set out in a disciplined scholarly manner. Marks may be deducted for slipshod presentation.

Failure to submit work on time may mean either that the work will not be marked, or that it will be penalized by the award of lower grades.

A+

The mark of A+ is awarded in exceptional cases when the criteria for a mark of A have been fulfilled to a very high degree.

A- ~ A

A piece of work at this level will demonstrate:

- § a thorough understanding of the topic and its implications
- § originality and/or breadth of thinking on the majority of the issues discussed
- § a wide knowledge and appropriate use of critical contributions on the topic
- § a consistent ability to organise material to support an argument
- § an ability to express the argument in a fluent and lucid manner

B ~ B+

A piece of work at this level will demonstrate:

- § a good understanding of the topic and its implications
- § a competent knowledge and use of critical contributions on the topic
- § a consistent ability to organise material to support an argument
- § an ability to express the argument in a fluent and lucid manner

However, such a piece of work will generally show less independence of thought and mastery of detail than is required for a mark of A. There may be some errors or misjudgements with regard to issues which are not central to the argument. A low mark within this band indicates more such failings than a high one. A high mark indicates that the work is close to the kind of quality needed for a mark of A or over, but has fallen down on a few points.

C+ ~ B-

A piece of work at this level will demonstrate:

- § a reasonable understanding of the topic and its implications
- § a familiarity with critical contributions on the topic
- § that in the majority of instances material is used to support an argument

A piece of work at this level will demonstrate:

- § some understanding of the topic and its implications
- § some knowledge of critical contributions to the topic
- § some ability to formulate and state an argument

However, it is likely to be lacking in detail and to include significant errors, omissions and misunderstandings. The grasp shown of critical and interpretative points will probably be sketchy, and the organisation of material and argument weak.

D- ~ C-

A piece of work at this level will demonstrate:

- § a basic understanding of the topic and its implications
- § a limited amount of knowledge of previous contributions
- § a basic ability to formulate and state an argument

However, there will be important deficiencies in such a piece of work, both in Periods of adequate detail and critical understanding. There will be pronounced errors and misunderstandings, and the answer may be so badly organised as to be difficult to follow

FAIL

A piece of work merits this grade when it is seriously flawed. Typically it will not take account of essential literature concerning the issue under discussion, will often lack structure / coherent argument, and conclusions (where drawn) will lack adequate support. This grade is automatically given in all cases of plagiarism. A piece of work which has been submitted and has received the mark 'fail' may be submitted once more but will not receive a mark higher than the lowest passing mark (D-).

Abstract

Students are asked in addition to provide on a separate sheet an abstract for each essay. Markers are asked to confirm that the abstract gives an accurate reflection of the contents of the essay.

Award of the Degree

Those who pass the coursework and related requirements are eligible to be awarded the degree of MA. A failure may be condoned at the discretion of the Director of the School if a student has gained higher marks in other coursework (normally an average over the year of C or more) and this will be taken into account by the Examination Board (a student who fails more than one course is not normally permitted to complete the MA programme).

Students will receive a graded diploma and a transcript of their marks. This transcript may be used in assessing students for entry to other courses.

The School does not contact individual students to inform them of the results of the Examination Board. Immediately after the Examination Board has completed its work, the list of students recommended by the External Examiner for award of the degree is posted on the School notice-board. Students who do not have direct access to the notice-board are of course encouraged to contact the CSS to be told their results directly by telephone or e-mail.

Aggregation rules

Aggregation rules for final MA marks:

For award with distinction:

1. The aggregate mark is greater than or equal to 3.67
2. A student whose mark falls below this threshold but nevertheless has a mark in the A Band for the dissertation plus 5 marks in the A Band as overall marks for courses, may also be considered for a distinction.

For award with merit:

The aggregate mark is less than 3.67 and greater than or equal to 3.0

For award with pass:

The aggregate mark is less than 3.0 and greater than or equal to 2.00

AND has not more than one failing grade as an overall mark for a course **

And the dissertation has a passing mark ***

 One failed course may be condoned by the Director of the School if a student has gained higher marks in other coursework (see "Award of the Degree") but the numerical mark will be recorded as 0, consequently lowering the overall aggregate mark.

The failed work may be resubmitted (ie rewritten under the same title) for the mark of PASS (D -) .

 Where a student has an F for the dissertation, the failed work may be resubmitted (ie rewritten under the same title) for the mark of PASS (D -) if the examination board agrees (for further definitions consult the appropriate publication of Lancaster University).

This remains the case when some marks have been awarded as the result of resubmission.

Appeals

Students have a right to appeal if they disagree with the marks awarded for examinations or other assessed work, or if they disagree with decisions made by the Centre related to academic work.

In the first instance you should arrange to discuss your mark with the course lecturer who might wish to revise the essay mark in the light of your comments. The correct way to arrange such a meeting is to write to the Director referring to the feedback given on your essay and giving your reasons for believing the mark as justified by the lecturer's comments does not correspond to the academic value of the essay.

He will forward a copy of this letter to the lecturer concerned. If you are dissatisfied with the outcome of the subsequent discussion with the lecturer, the essay can be referred to the external examiner who will decide the final mark for the essay at the examinations board meeting held at the end of the year. The Director will arrange for such referral on receipt of a written request from you.

If you are in doubt about whether the essay should be referred to the external examiner the Director can ask a second faculty member to look at the essay and let him know whether s/he feels that there is a case for requesting revision of the mark given.

Please note that when an essay is reassessed either by the original marker or by the external examiner the final decision about the mark always lies with the external examiner at the end of the year. Please note too that when a mark is reassessed the outcome need not necessarily be a higher mark than that originally awarded ie reassessment could involve the award of a mark lower than that first received.

For other matters (pastoral or personal problems) students may approach their tutors, the Director or Office Manager.

If work is not submitted on time it will receive a lower mark than if submitted by the published deadline

Plagiarism

PLAGIARIZED WORK WILL FAIL. STUDENTS GUILTY OF PLAGIARISM WILL BE ASKED TO LEAVE THE PROGRAMME

NB. – Issues surrounding plagiarism are dealt with in detail in the pre-session English writing course. If you still have doubts, consult the English language tutor, who will always be available to give advice.

Material which has already been submitted as course work for a degree programme at the Centre for Social Studies, Graduate School for Social Research or elsewhere may not be submitted a second time as course work in any of the programmes at the GSSR/CSS.

Here's what the Lancaster University Sociology Department MA Handbook says about the issue

PLAGIARISM AND COLLUSION

Core values of academic integrity (honesty and trust) lie at the heart of our academic enterprise, and they underpin all activities within the University. The University values a culture of honesty and mutual trust, and it expects all members of the University to respect and uphold these core values at all times, in everything they do at, for and in the name of the University.

Academic integrity is important because, without honesty and trust, true academic discourse becomes impossible, learning is distorted and the evaluation of student progress and academic quality is seriously compromised. Consequently, the University is committed to -

- a. defending the academic credibility and reputation of the institution
- b. protecting the standards of its awards
- c. ensuring that its students receive due credit for the work they submit for assessment
- d. advising its students of the need for academic integrity, and providing them with guidance on best practice in studying and learning
- e. educating its students about what intellectual property is, why it matters, how to protect their own, and how to legitimately access other people's
- f. protecting the interests of those students who do not cheat.

Cheating, a form of academic malpractice, includes: cheating in examinations, plagiarism, duplication and false declaration.

What is Plagiarism?

According to the institutional framework plagiarism: involves the unacknowledged use of someone else's work, usually in coursework, and passing it off as if it were his/her own. This category of cheating includes the following:

1. collusion, where a piece of work prepared by a group is represented as if it were the student's own;
2. commission or use of work by the student which is not his/her own and representing it as if it were:
 - purchase of a paper from a commercial service, including internet sites, whether pre-written or specially prepared for the student concerned
 - submission of a paper written by another person, either by a fellow student or a person who is not a member of the university;
3. duplication of the same or almost identical work for more than one module;
4. the act of copying or paraphrasing a paper from a source text, whether in manuscript, printed or electronic form, without appropriate acknowledgement;
5. submission of another student's work, whether with or without that student's knowledge or consent.
6. Cheating in class tests, occurs when a candidate communicates, or attempts to communicate, with a fellow candidate or individual who is neither an invigilator or member of staff; copies, or attempts to copy from a fellow candidate; attempts to introduce or consult during the examination, any unauthorised printed or written material, or electronic calculating or information storage device; or mobile phones or other communication device, or personates or allows himself or herself to be impersonated.

Fabrication of results: occurs when a student claims to have carried out tests, experiments or observations that have not taken place or presents results not supported by the evidence with the object of obtaining an unfair advantage.

The University regards all forms of cheating as unacceptable, because they undermine the core values of academic integrity (honesty and trust). Each form of cheating is a breach of the University Regulations, and is liable to be pursued by appropriate disciplinary action.

EXAMPLES OF PLAGIARISM AND OF CORRECT REFERENCING

Let's begin with a passage from David Harvey's The Condition of Postmodernity. We then present examples of how this passage might be used in an essay. Note that, as this is a long-ish quote (+40 words), it is indented and single spaced, with no quotation marks around it. Short quotes are not indented and placed in quotation marks (see example 3 below). Direct quotations require page numbers.

The postmodern penchant for jumbling together all manner of references to past styles is one of its more pervasive characteristics. Reality, it seems, is being shaped to mimic media images. But the outcome of inserting such a practice into the contemporary socio-economic and political context is more than a little quirky (Harvey 1989: 85).

Example 1

In order to understand what postmodernism is we need to recognise the postmodern penchant for jumbling together all manner of references to past styles as one of its more pervasive characteristics. Reality, it seems, is being shaped to mimic media images such that we can no longer distinguish the real from the simulation.

Is this plagiarism? Yes. Why? The writer has incorporated Harvey's text word for word, bar one, without indicating that they are from Harvey's work.

Example 2:

As Harvey suggests, postmodernism can be recognised by the way in which it mixes together, in an eclectic manner, elements from different artistic styles from the past. He goes on to suggest that such a move is a reflection of a culture in which there is a blurring of the distinction between reality and its representation, notably in the media. This has perhaps developed to such an extent that it now appears sometimes as if reality is a representation of what we see in the media rather than the other way around (Harvey, 1989).

Is this plagiarism? No. Why? This paraphrases Harvey and draws on his point but does not copy him directly. It also acknowledges him as a source for the argument that is put forward, at the beginning of the paragraph, and at the end, with the appropriate reference. This is paraphrasing, which is acceptable in a student piece of work. It shows that you have understood an argument and been able to convey it in your own words, rather than use the words of another as if they were your own without any acknowledgement to their original source. The student will have also listed the reference in the bibliography, following the conventions outlined in this handbook.

Example 3:

If we accept that postmodernism is primarily defined as the 'jumbling together all manner of references to past styles' (Harvey, 1989: 85), then questions about the relationship between reality and representation arise, since 'references to past styles' are in effect forms of mimicry.

Is this plagiarism? No. Why? The author has quoted Harvey's words verbatim and summarised his argument, has put the quote in quotation marks and has provided the full and accurate reference. The student will have also listed the reference in the bibliography, following the conventions outlined in this handbook.

Example 4:

In intro of the essay the author writes:

David Harvey has argued that postmodernism is characterised by 'jumbling together all manner of references to past styles' (Harvey 1989: 85). In this essay, I will discuss this statement in relation to late 20th century urban architecture. ...

Then later in the essay, on p. 3, the author writes:

The example of the XYZ building in urbancity testifies to the extent to which mimicry characterises postmodernism. Reality, it seems, is being shaped to mimic media images. But the outcome of inserting such a practice into the contemporary socio-economic and political context is more than a little quirky.

Is this plagiarism? Yes. Why? The author cites Harvey in one part of the essay, but appropriates the words or ideas it contains, without a proper reference, in another part. Such stratagems will not protect a writer against the charge of plagiarism. If you fail to cite another's words or ideas wherever you use them, the fact that you have cited your source elsewhere or have listed it in the bibliography does not mitigate your dishonesty.

The University is extremely keen to help students create original, properly referenced work, and has several mechanisms working together to help achieve this. Firstly, if work is handed in that isn't original, it is checked by the lecturers, who are, of course experts in their subjects, and who also have a fair idea of what their students are capable of producing. The situation for someone who has plagiarised is roughly similar to that of someone who has forged a banknote, and then presents it to an expert on banknotes for checking. Consequently, a lot of students who hand in work that isn't theirs get caught. In addition, to assist lecturers who believe that part or all of a piece of work was copied off the internet, the University uses a tool that collates matches with the internet to produce a report on what was copied, and from where.

In addition to deterrent mechanisms like the ones above, departments give advice to help students know what they need to do to create good essays, and the University, through CELT helps students too as follows:

Getting assistance in order to help produce better essays

CELT's SLDC group provide free courses for students to help with understanding what is required and how to do referencing properly.

Information on the subject of plagiarism is given here , and a section in their website here contains information for students about how to write essays properly.

QUOTATIONS AND REFERENCES

In order to avoid plagiarism, it is important to properly cite your sources in the text and provide a complete bibliography at the end. Whenever you directly quote another author or paraphrase (i.e. put an author's ideas in your own words) you should always provide references in the text. Although there are many acceptable ways of doing this, the Centre recommends using the Harvard System, which is widely used in the social sciences. In particular, we advise you to use the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (called the APA style). There is a copy of the manual in the library or you can purchase your own at any English-language bookstore in Warsaw.

References in the text

The APA style uses citations that are included in parentheses directly after the quotation or paraphrased text (also called "in-text citation"). The citation includes the author's last name, date of publication, and the page number (if you are directly quoting that author).

Here are some examples of citations for a text that has been paraphrased:

It is argued that nationalism assumes the national unit is also a unit of political organization (Gellner, 1983).

Gellner (1983) argues that nationalism assumes the national unit is also a unit of political organization.

Here are some examples of citations for a passage that has been directly quoted:

"Nationalism is primarily a political principle, which holds that the political and the national unit be congruent" (Gellner, 1983, p. 56).

Gellner claims that “[n]ationalism is primarily a political principle, which holds that the political and the national unit be congruent” (1983, p. 56).

Citing from the Internet

For Internet sources, you should cite as if you are citing from a book. The only difference is that you use the paragraph number instead of the page number. If the document is not very long, you do not have to include the paragraph number.

Here is an example:

There are a number of advantages in this line of defence (Viviano, 1995: para 3).

MAKING A BIBLIOGRAPHY

You should always provide a complete bibliography at the end of your essay, which lists all the sources that you have referenced. Remember that the bibliography should be in alphabetical order by author’s last name. Please see the APA manual for more information on how to make a bibliography.

Here are a few examples of how to make bibliographical entries for different texts:

A book

Stark, Oded. (1991). The migration of labor. Oxford: Basil Blackwell, Ltd.

Two books by the same author, published in the same year

Saunders, Peter. (1990a). Social class and stratification. London: Routledge.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Q. What spacing should I use?

A. The spacing should be 1.5 or 2.

Q. What font should I use?

A. New Times Roman (12 point).

Q. What do I do if I have a quotation within a quotation?

A. Use single quotations marks for the quotation within a quotation. For example:

Ritzer argues that “their efforts to negotiate treaties reducing nuclear weapons have often become bogged down in trying to accurately assess ‘the relative throw weight’ of their respective nuclear arms” (Ritzer, 1982, p. 4).

Q. If I quote, for example Marx, but in a book for example by Derrida, who should I mention?

A. The idea of referencing is that you state where you found the words or ideas. Of course, there is little point not referencing Marx. So a good reference would include both, something like this: “.....” (Marx in Derrida, 1986).

Q. Do I need to present short and long quotations differently?

Yes. Quotations of less than four typed lines should be set in quotations marks within a sentence. Longer passages should be set off from the main text by being indented and single spaced. You do not need to use quotation marks with indented, single-spaced quotations.

Specific academic writing guidelines and advice will be provided in the courses taught during the pre-session and during the year. In addition, the document "Writing a Thesis: Official Guidelines of the CSS" is available on the Intranet. Please also consult ‘Course essay titles: a guide’ in the appendix to this handbook.

Scholarship opportunities for further study

² Fees paid for study contribute to but do not wholly cover teaching costs.

There are opportunities for students to continue their studies in the PhD programme of the Graduate School for Social Research /Centre for social Studies, or elsewhere. Information about scholarships is posted on the notice board. Students requiring additional information about the possibility of further study should also consult the Director for details of study advice centres in Warsaw.

Students at the GSSR who have received financial aid for their studies will not be awarded financial aid for subsequent study at the GSSR at the same level (ie MA).

Code of Practice

(students are also referred to the code of ethics available in the CSS library)

1. Attendance (see also pp 6, 13)

Students are expected to attend all meetings/classes for their courses. If a student is unable to attend, s/he should contact the lecturer concerned, or the Academic Director, before the class wherever possible to explain why.

If students are persistently absent from classes without prior arrangement with teaching staff, the matter will be referred to the Centre's Director. Students are also reminded that financial aid is awarded in order that holders may attend courses on a full-time basis for the entire Programme. Any absence from Warsaw for any reason by such students during the Programme should be agreed with the Director, and the permission of Director of the School should be obtained BEFORE DEPARTURE.

In general if a student is absent from more than one third (ie a total of four meetings if the course is held once a week for twelve weeks) of any one course, they will be considered to have failed the course by default. A student who fails more than one course is not normally permitted to complete the MA programme.

2. Absence of Staff

If a lecturer or tutor is unable to take a class for any reason, or if a class needs to be rescheduled, the lecturer or tutor concerned should give the students ample notice. Normally this will be a matter of verbal communication followed by a notice on the Departmental board. Where changes at short notice cannot be avoided, due to sickness for example, it is the responsibility of the lecturer to notify the Director who will inform the students concerned. When timetable changes do occur at short notice, messages will be placed on the Centre's notice board, and on the door of the classroom.

3. Timekeeping

Staff and students should be ready to begin sessions on time. Sessions should also end promptly to allow other classes to begin on time.

4. Course work requirements

Course outlines will specify details of course content, lecture titles, and topics for each week of the course. Details of how the course will be assessed, including the required length of essays and deadlines for their submission will also be given. Changes will be communicated to the students in writing.

5. Extensions to coursework deadlines

Extensions can only be granted for good reason. Applications for extension should be submitted in writing (in good time before the relevant essay deadline) to the Director, giving reasons for the request. Unauthorized extensions will not be condoned. Essays submitted after the deadline will be penalised at a rate of one grade per day (ie A becomes A-). Essays submitted two weeks or more after the deadline will receive a mark of “Fail” , “D-” or “D”.

Non-submission will not normally be condoned by the Examination Board ie if you do not submit the required coursework for every course you will fail the programme.

6. Marking of coursework

Essays and any examinations set will be marked by the lecturer or tutor responsible for the course. Work to be marked should be submitted to the main office. Marks for essays will be made available to individual students as they become available, along with markers' comments.

The dissertation should be submitted to the main office. Students should submit two copies of their dissertation: one bearing a title and the student's name and the other bearing the title alone. Students must not include their name anywhere in the text of the work or in any other way impair the anonymity of the marking process. All dissertations (which account for 40% of a student's final mark) will be blind marked by two members of staff neither of whom will be the supervisor of the student in question.

Where two sets of marks differ, the piece of work will be passed to a third marker who will adjudicate. All marked work will be passed to the external examiner.

Students should familiarize themselves with the notes on plagiarism in this Course Handbook. Plagiarism is a serious offence. In proven cases students will be asked to leave the course. The Department reserves the right to re-examine any work previously passed if later evidence appears to suggest that work has been plagiarized. In particular students are reminded that material should not be taken from a student's own essay and repeated in his/her dissertation. Such reuse is considered to be self-plagiarism and leads to the dissertation being given a mark of 'fail'. Choose a dissertation topic which does not overlap with any essay topic.

All marks will be discussed in the Examination Board and will be available to students after the board meets (usually in January).

7. Appeals procedure

Any student who is dissatisfied with the marking of his/her work may make representations to the Director who will explain the current procedure for making such appeals. In general, grade changes will be considered only in exceptional circumstances. The use of an external assessor and a standardized grading system is designed as a safeguard against unjust marking (see p 14ff).

If a student is unable to submit a piece of work on time, good reasons must be given in writing to the Director in advance. Medical certificates must be submitted when illness is given as a reason for such delays.

General problems should be raised first with the course lecturer before bringing them to the attention of the Director .

8. Course Evaluation

At the end of each course, students will be asked to complete an evaluation form. These forms will be anonymous and will be distributed and collected by the student representative for the course.

In addition to the course evaluation, informal feedback is welcome at any time during the academic year.

9. Advice and Guidance

For general academic advice students should feel free to approach any member of the faculty. For details of course organization, coursework requirements, deadlines, and other administrative matters, students should consult the Academic Director.

If students have any concerns about a course and do not feel able to approach the relevant member of the faculty, they should approach the Director or Academic Director who will mediate on their behalf.

If problems of a personal nature arise, students may approach the Office Manager or other member of staff, all of whom will deal with students' personal concerns in the strictest confidence.

10. Student Representation

Students are responsible for selecting their own representative and deputy representative at the beginning of and again during the academic year. The Academic Director assists in this process by arranging a ballot of student opinion. The student representative thus elected is invited to attend joint Faculty and Staff Committee Meetings and is responsible for conveying students' views to faculty/staff and vice versa.

Students will always be informed of any important decisions affecting the course, their work or the department in general. This will normally take the form of notices on the general notice board, a written notice to each student, or verbally in an open meeting.

Faculty and staff will take seriously and will address promptly any concerns presented by students.

11. Return of essays

Every effort will be made to ensure that marks for essays will be available for collection from the main office as soon as possible after the closing date for submission (plus any extensions granted).

12. Availability of reading lists

Reading lists for course will be posted in the database (<https://db.css.edu.pl>) as soon as they become available.

13. Changes in availability of courses

Students will normally be informed of unavoidable changes to Programmes before the registration period. If any courses are cancelled as a result of below the minimum number of students registering for the course, students affected will be notified immediately after the close of the registration period, and alternative courses will be suggested.

Student Course Evaluation Form

The following Student Course Evaluation Form is administered at the end of each course. It is a tool for ensuring the quality of courses offered.

The evaluations are anonymous.

Forms are distributed during the final class of the course.

The course lecturer appoints one student to collect the forms, put them in an envelope, sign across the seal and return the envelope to the main office.

The lecturer should not be in the room when forms are being completed.

Copies of the form are made –one set for the Director of the School and the other to be given to the lecturer after grading of work has been completed and grades have been submitted.

The purpose of the second set is to allow the lecturer to use the feedback from students to improve future presentations of the course.

Course essay titles: a guide

Students must be set more robust intellectual challenges in their essays even if they do fall within the broader ambit of their dissertation interests
- George Kolankiewicz

This short paper agreement is based on the assumption that well-thought-out titles are very important in creating the proper grounds for achievement.

Lancaster University requirements

Comments from Lancaster on the subject of essay-writing have included the following:

In general the essay is expected to address an issue that arises directly from the course that is being taught, that requires some original reflection, and that is feasible in terms of the time it would require to complete it satisfactorily and in terms of the physical and intellectual accessibility of materials.

According to Lancaster documents, sociology graduates should be able to do the following:

- describe a range of key concepts and theoretical approaches within sociology
- recognise the patterns that underpin social diversity and inequality
- recognise and illustrate the use of comparison in sociology
- recognise the social relationships between individuals and groups
- recognise the processes that underpin social change and social stability
- identify diverse research strategies and methods and illustrate their use in gaining sociological knowledge
- recognise and illustrate the relationship between sociological argument and evidence
- recognise ways in which sociology can be distinguished from other forms of understanding
- describe contrasting interpretation of events
- gather and summarise material provided in sociology textbooks and more specialised sources
- cite evidence and make judgements about its merits
- contrast viewpoints and discuss them.

Essays should ideally and with few exceptions have a question, hypothesis, problem or aim which can feasibly be answered, accepted/rejected, solved or achieved within the obvious limits of time, resources and level of study. Possible exceptions to this might include statistics, methods and social theory courses, whose teachers may conclude that their subjects present their own specific difficulties which are best confronted in other ways.

Students are encouraged to take titles seriously. It is suggested that they consciously expand on the title in the introduction; and if possible check whether the essay title has been properly addressed in the final draft. A good essay title leads to a suitable academic journey, during which the students should learn for themselves and thereby achieve something important. When the subject is fixed, it is possible to establish an aim for the essay and to build arguments and lines of reasoning on this basis.

Titles are not thesis statements, hypotheses or questions. There should, however, be a clear link evident between the title (which is the subject of the essay) and the thesis statement/hypothesis (which is the aim of the essay). The title, although in itself descriptive, is part of the essay in the sense that we must understand the entirety of the essay in these Periods. Essays with a poor title but good introduction and statements of intent therefore have a dissonance: we can understand the essay in a number of ways. This ambiguity is not present when the title is effective. The title is thus important in setting in motion the other necessary undertakings in any written assignment.

Previous CSS essay titles

Examples of titles which were considered suitable. Many of them are constructed as questions, which can then be answered; there is good use of words which indicate an analytical, sociological approach (“perspective,” “problem,” “critique,” “challenging”); all of them make the essay subject clear, and easy to ascertain for the marker whether or not the essayist has succeeded. There is sufficient detail in them (sometimes provided by subtitles) for the topic to be immediately apprehended even by laypeople.
